THE COUNTY FAIR.

New London County Agricultural Sotral Labor Union for the joint observance of Labor day. This idea has worked out most successfully in past years and there is no reason to supone but what it will prove the big attraction in the county today for those who lay aside their war-or other activities to get the benefits of the oliday which is set aside for labor.

Labor day, which has been the opening day of the fair for a number of years, comes this year on next to the earliest day possible inasmuch as it is definitely fixed for the first Monday in September. For that reason it is possible that it will prevent as great a number from displaying agriultural products as it would at some later day but there can be no quesand interesting assortment, and inasmuch as everyone is thinking agri-culturally these days and thousands who gave the tilling of the soil practically no attention before are now contributing their mite there is bound to be a greater enthusiasm and rivally in this particular department. The results which others get cannot fail to arouse keen interest With efforts made to bring other departments including the amusements up to a high standard the great gathering where the country and city folk hobnob and rub elbows, swap gossip and stories should be the center for all towns of the county, while the fact cannot be overlooked that it efficials in making up their proprogramme from year to year.

SPEEDING THE ADVANCE.

Regardless of the resistance which the enemy is giving by the throwing in of rainforcements at various places along the line. It is insufficient to hold the allies. Perhaps the idea is simply to retard the British and until guns, material and troops can be moved but even so the captures which are being made, and being made steadily, make it evident back temporarily. that the Toutons are not getting away as clean as they expected or as safely as they would like,

With no definite schedule, except to strike where the best results can be obtained, the ailies are moving ahead first in the north and then in south with blows in the center when becomes necessary to straighten out the salients. For some days has been evident that General Foch is aiming at the capture of Doual and Cambrai in the north and Laon in the south and it cannot fail to be appreciated even in Germany that he is making excellent progress.

In the north the recovery of Kemmel hill, the advance to the outskirts of Lens, with the observation of fires in Lens and Armentieres, and the taking of Bullecourt make it evident that the Germans are going to be forced to last ditch fighting if they retain their hold upon the Hindenburg line. This opinion is strengthened by the driving of the Germans out of make a close study of the scenic at-Peronne, the crossing of the Somme tractions even if they didn't see as and the progress being made on the many. Oue while it is a significant fact that the British losses in the past week were much lighter than in the preceding one. The rapidity with which kaiger's forces are rashing back-the allies move forward, with artillery as well as infantry cannot fail to make a serious impression upon those who are conducting the retreat. At the present rate of progress it ought that some repairs have been made to be long before the allies will thereto. be knocking at St. Quentin and Laon.

They know, or at east should know, that the imperia German government is responsible for SUGGESTIONS FOR encing, and even then, if they were properly informed, they would appreciate the fact that what they are complaining about has been far less severe in their case than in the case of the allied civilians, for the air raids over German cities are conducted with a view to destroying establishments of military importance while Garman raids have no restrictions whatever. The people of Germany do not like the effects of the aerial bombs any better than the army liked the results when the allies began to use gas and employed it even more effectually than did the Huns. It is the usual result of trying a dose of one's own medicine but the people of the Rhine might as well realize that they will get more before they get less.

ENCOURAGING THE ENEMY.

It might be well for those who are o inclined to launch out into a strike ecause their demands for an increase n wages, amounting to double or more than double what they were receiving before the war, are not con-sidered justified, if they would stop to think what an impression their actions must create upon the nations which this country is fighting.
